

Seeing Yellow?

School is back in session, and those big yellow boxes of kids are back on the streets. Already this morning something happened that had me seeing red. In my own neighborhood, I stopped for a school bus (with its lights and little stop sign flashing). As kids boarded the bus, some loser in a beat up Honda proceeded around me and the bus.

Would that make you mad too? It should. Many children are injured and killed each year by that very violation. I received this bus accident photo a few months ago. The only details I have are that nobody was seriously injured, and that there were no skid marks from the mini-van.

Look folks ... school busses may be slow and annoying to be behind, but they're bigger and carry precious cargo. Respect the rules.
